GERANIUM Pelargonium peltatum 'Fir 181'

17A) Origin and breeding history of the variety

'Fir 181' was derived from a hybridization made in 1998, and was selected as one seedling within the offspring in 1999.

The female parent was a hybrid seedling, no. 96-1734-2, characterized by violet, double flowers, foliage with distinct zonation and vigorous growth.

The male parent was the hybrid seedling no. 96-1631-7, characterized by red, single-type flowers, leaves with weak zonation, vigorous growth, and long, trailing plant habit.

Hybridization and first selection of the seedlings was conducted at Moncarapacho, Portugal. Cuttings from the selected seedling were taken to Hillscheid for further selection and trial cultivation in 2000.

17 B and E) Statement of uniformity and stability

Methods for maintaining the variety

Variety 'Fir 181' originated from a single seedling that was propagated asexually. It is a uniform clone, without genetical variation.

The stock plants in Hillscheid, Germany, and Cuernavaca, Mexico, had been obtained by tissue culture and were checked for health and stability of the described characteristics. They are used for propagation by cuttings (usually stem terminal cuttings).

17 C) Distinctness statement

There is no very close variety known to the breeder, but it could be compared with 'Fislulu', pBR application no. 98- 1857.

In comparison to 'Fislulu', 'Fir 181' has a less deep shade of purple flower colour, larger flowers, and differently shaped leaves.
